PROBLEM

Deciding on what style to use to create a nice LaTeX poster for the RHUL Information Security Group Open Day.

SOLUTION

Using the beamer style file created for use at the RHUL Information Security Group Open Day. With this style file you can painlessly create a nice looking poster to present at the open day (I hope). Here is presented an example poster that shows off this style.

ABSTRACT

This is an example poster using the ISG open day beamer theme. The `.tex` file should be a good guide to help people to use the theme. The poster gives some description of the few things that authors will need to be aware of. Generally it is expected that anyone familiar with LaTeX should be able to use this poster style without difficulty. I think that the style is fairly stable, however I doubt it's perfect, if you find an error please let me (Rob Lee) know via git or by email.

Overview

Motivation:

- The beamer style file has been designed to be straightforward to use and should be fairly easy for people to use if they are familiar with making posters in Beamer.
- Most of the complexity is hidden in the `beamerthemeISGOpenDayposter.sty` file. I don't expect people to need to go in there to change things.
- I am confident that this style file is not without bugs and if you find one please let me know. If you work out how to fix the problem and tell me that at the same time, that's even better!

Kinds of Block

There are four kinds of block which can be used to hold content.

1. `leftColumnBlock` is used to create blocks that have the title flushed right - these are used in the left column of this poster.
2. `centreColumnBlock` is used to create blocks that have the title centred - these are used in the middle column of this poster.
3. `rightColumnBlock` is used to create blocks that have the title flushed left - these are used in the right column of this poster.
